Improving library data with linked data

Owen Stephens
May 2015

“With the Internet, we each have our own
printing press”

Holbert, G.L. (2002). Technology, libraries and the Internet: a comparison of the impact of the printing press and World Wide Web. E-JASL, 3(1-2).

“there may always exist additional sources of data, somewhere in the world, to complement the data one has at hand”

[s.n.]

What has this got to do with linked data?

With Linked Data you can...

- Create and publish unique identifiers for things you know about
- Make statements about things you know about using identifiers (your own, or other peoples)

Linked Data

- Enables you to say things about your own resources
- Enables you to say things about other resources
- Enables other people to say things about your resources
